In this four-part series, KiniBiz looks at former Finance Minister Daim Zainuddin and his role in corporate Malaysia. In the first article we examine the extent of the influence of the man widely believed to be the most powerful in corporate Malaysia in his heyday. We move on to track Daim's journey from a teacher to influential power broker, two-time finance minister and powerful corporate figure. Although he has maintained a low-profile Daim has been active in the global arena focusing on banks. In the third part of this series, we look at Daim's global banking empire. KiniBiz concludes this series with a look at recent moves by Daim and some of his associates to liquidate some holdings and asks if there is an underlying motive or a common concerted move.
